DOUBLE TOIL AND TROUBLE IN THE CABINET.

NEW YORK, March 29. The Herald's Washington special says: It is not possible or expedient any longer to conceal the fact that there is serious trouble in the cabinet. Certain of the president's nominations have caused a feeling which may result in the resignation of two of its members. The nomination of Wm. E. Chandler to be solicitor of the treasury, was, it is said, made against the protest of Attorney General MacVeagh and without his consent. The solicitor general is the right arm of an attorney general, his deputy and mainstay. The president has set his heart on having Chandler occupy this place. His name is now before the senate for confirmation and it is reported this evening, on what seemed entirely trustworthy authority, that the president, who at one time it is believed, thought of recalling Chandler's name, had determined not to do so. It is possible, of course, that Chandler may not be confirmed, and Phillips, who has been solicitor for a number of years and who has declined a judgeship in the court of claims offered him the other day by the president, would in that case retain the solicitor generalship, unless the president should after the adjournment of the senate remove him and put Mr. Chandler in his place. There are rumors current this evening that if the senate should confirm Mr. Chandler to be solicitor-general, Mr. MacVeagh will retire from the attorney-generalship, holding Mr. Chandler's appointment as evidence that the attorney-general does not possess the confidence of the president.

JAMES THREATENS TO RESIGN.

The nomination of Mr. Robertson to be collector of New York is the cause of another cabinet trouble. As the president has refused to withdraw Robertson's name it is possible that James will withdraw from the cabinet. It is even rumored to-night that the president will accept MacVeagh's and James' resignations and that their successors are already picked out.

COMPLAINING CALIFORNIANS. [redacted]

Californians here complain bitterly that the republicans should take up Gorham. They recall the fact that the republican state convention of California last year unanimously adopted a resolution asking the national committee to keep Gorham out of their state, because he had made himself odious to the republicans there before by stumping the state for the democratic candidate for governor. It is said here that Senator Miller, of California, has fatally compromised himself with his people at home by his support of Gorham. Democratic persistency in the senate has, therefore, secret encouragement from republicans and will continue to have this unless the republican nominations are so far revised as to eliminate Gorham and Riddelberger, the latter not on account of any objection personal to himself, but because the senators do not relish the appearance of anything which smacks of bargains.

COMMENTS ON THE CABINET SQUABBLE.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Times on the trouble caused by Robertson in the cabinet says the squabble is not likely to be an edifying one and the people are more likely to be struck with its ridiculous than its serious side. Unfortunately for the president it is not one in which he will have the moral support of the people as against a clique of politicians. In making a vacancy to accommodate an active representative of a faction of the republican party in this state he not only invited the hostility of the dormant faction but acted on the principle that public offices of the highest class may be used as counters in the game of party supremacy. That is a game which if he is to play at all the president must play with a good deal more finesse than he has recently exemplified; the gentlemen on the other side can give him odds and beat him with comparative ease in any such trial of skill as he has challenged them to.

HAMPTON ON MAHONE.

Johnston said in the senate that he would not answer Mahone's speech till it should appear on record.

Hampton denied that South Carolina democrats had repudiated the state debt. If there had been any repudiation it was by Mahone's friends, the republicans, when they controlled the state. The democrats opposed the proposition to change officers of the senate because it would break the old precedents, because the senate was here for executive business and chiefly because grave suspicions had taken hold of the public mind that there had been a corrupt bargain. Mahone had denied there had been any impure consideration. He congratulated Mahone and would say he would strengthen his position before the country by showing what consideration had moved him. It was due to this body that the suspicion should be proved groundless if it were so. Let the republicans organize a committee to ascertain the truth or falsity of the rumors that a vote had been controlled by promise of place or patronage. If the damning charges were untrue stamp out the calumny forever, if true the constitution gave ample redress. He referred to similar charges against Clay and Adams which defeated Adams for the presidency and blighted Clay's political aspirations. Clay had risked his life to vindicate his honor, and Randolph who brought the charges had afterward made the amende honorable in order that the senate might be freed from suspicion. He didn't want Dawes' resolution acted immediately. He referred to the magnanimity of the democrats in allowing Kellogg to retain his seat. It now appeared that Kellogg and Mahone were not only leaders but masters of the republican party. They had clasped hands across the bloody chasm and were clamoring for the old flag and appropriation. He sympathized with the good old state of Virginia and could not doubt her true voice would soon be heard unmistakably declaring for the maintenance of public faith and political integrity.

He said the air was full of rumors of a bargain and he argued to show there were singular coincidences confirming the fact that there was a bargain. It was peculiar that Mahone, who up to a late period had always been a democrat, should vote with the republicans on the organization of every committee and that in a very short time afterwards the republicans should meet in caucus and nominate his intimate friends, Gorham, who had bolted the party and been read out of it, and Riddleberger, who had always been a democrat. It might have be no bargain, it might not even been an understanding, but he would call it a peculiar coincidence. He compared the republicans in turn to the coon which found a skunk up his tree, to the man who couldn't let go of the bear without help and to the man who won an elephant at a raffle. They didn't know what to do with Mahone.

READJUSTERS AND BOURBONS.

The difference between readjusters and Bourbons in Virginia on the debt question is about as follows: McCullough on the debt payers bill fixed with the consent of the creditors the debt at thirty-two million dollars, made the coupons receivable for taxes and other dues to the state and the bonds non-taxable; it fixed the rate of interest at an average of four per cent. The Riddleberger bill which the readjusters stand by fixed the debt at less than twenty million dollars, made the coupons not receivable for taxes, made the bonds taxable and the rate of interest 3 per cent. It was proposed to make this bill a law without the consent of the state's creditors on the ground that it was just to both creditors and the state. The readjusters' bill excludes from the state debt the interest accumulated during the war and reconstruction period. The McCullough bill includes this

RESIGN? OH NO!

The causes leading to the disaffection of MacVeagh and James were briefly considered, it is said, in to day's cabinet meeting. The president will undoubtedly make a firm stand in the nomination of Chandler and Robertson, no one seems to believe the name of either will be withdrawn. If in consequence of the confirmation of either or both those gentlemen, Postmaster Gen James or attorney General MacVeagh finds it incompatible to remain in the cabinet it is believed his resignation will be promptly accepted and a new man called to his place without delay. There is good authority for the statement that MacVeagh opposed Chandler's selection but yielded so far as to postpone any intention of resigning until it was seen whether the senate would confirm or reject the nomination of Chandler. Should it be confirmed, MacVeagh's resignation is among the possibilities, although his friends will endeavor to dissuade him from taking such a step. There is some reason to believe he has already decided to remain in the cabinet, even in the event of Chandler's confirmation.

Postmaster General James declines to talk about his attitude in the reported disagreement. It is not believed he will tender his resignation.

NO CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

There is no change yet in the senate situation, but it is probable that some arrangement will be made by to-morrow for an executive session, as the nominations are accumulating rapidly. The men nominated by the president are getting very nervous, and urging an executive session. A close friend of Secretary Blaine said this evening the nomination of Robertson would not be withdrawn under any circumstances. While Conkling and Blaine dislike the nomination the reports of their waging war against the administration are exaggerated. The opinion in high official circles is there will not be a war inside the republican party. Attorney General MacVeagh pronounces the report of his contemplated resignation without foundation. A strong pressure is being brought to bear to induce the president to withdraw the nomination of Chandler for solicitor general, and if not withdrawn an attempt will be made to reject him in the senate. Prominent republicans who saw the president to day say neither Robertson or Chandler will be withdrawn unless they request it themselves. The democratic senators are unanimously determined against Chandler.

Funeral of General Upton.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The funeral of the late General Upton whose remains arrived here from San Francisco Saturday night, took place this afternoon from Sand Beach church. All the flags in the city are at half mast out of respect to the dead soldier. The church was heavily draped in mourning and the services though brief were very impressive. Among the officers present were General Sherman and General Alexander, of San Francisco. There was profuse display of flowers, the offerings of citizens. The remains were not shown. The pall bearers were General F H Townsend, of Albany, Prof's. S S Michie and L Andrews West Point, Col H A Dupont, of Wilmington, Maj J P Hanger, of N Y, Lieut G M Davis, of Ft Adams, N Y, Maj G B Campbell, of San Francisco and Gen Richard Arnold, of Hancock's staff. At the city limits the funeral cortege was met by two posts of the grand army of the republic and a band escorted to Fort Hill cemetery where the body was interred by the side of Lieut Kehoe, who was killed in the Custer massacre. The streets were thronged with people who had gathered to witness the procession although there was no military display.

Frigid Floods.

BREAKING UP OF THE MISSOURI ICE.

ST. PIERRE, March 29. The ice broke in the Missouri at midnight Sunday, overflowing this post to a depth of five feet, driving the inhabitants to the bluffs. It has since receded greatly. The steamer Weston at the levee at Yankton is floating down the stream with the ice.

FLOOD ON THE U. P.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, March 20. No passenger train has arrived from San Francisco since Saturday, and only two have gone west. The washouts are heavy. Great damage has already been done and more is anticipated, both to the company and to individuals. The bridge between here and Omaha was terribly shaken by the breakup of the ice in the Missouri yesterday, and it was a question for a time, whether it would not go down.

SUBSIDING OF THE FLOOD.

The water having subsided in the Platte valley, the work of repairing is being pushed with great vigor and by Saturday next the damage will be repaired sufficiently to admit of running through trains again. Meantime the Union Pacific trains will be run with little or no delay over the B. and M. railway to Kearney which road is to-day again in condition to receive and handle these trains and no further trouble is feared. Three delayed Union Pacific trains arrived here this morning. Through freight will to-morrow be forwarded over the B. and M. The damages to the main lines of the road will first be repaired and then will follow the job of work on the branches. Over 50 per cent. of the bridges have washed away in Nebraska by freshets and numerous grist mills have been destroyed. Cattle, sheep, hogs, etc., have been drowned in large numbers in the Platte valley. As far as can be learned no persons were drowned, except one woman and two children; west of Schuyler, near by them, was found the box of an emigrant wagon, and it is supposed they were part of an emigrant party, the rest of whom were also probably drowned. The ice went out of the Elkhorn this afternoon without doing any damage excepting knocking the U P bridge over the Elkhorn out of line, but it can easily be repaired.

Railroad Rumors.

LOUISVILLE, March 29.—Last week Huntington came west and gave special attention to his connections to and from Louisville. Some one had offered him a short line at a price he considered high and he came to look over the ground. For some time he has been negotiating for the control of the Elizabethtown and Paducah and Memphis roads in order to reach Memphis. Saturday he spent in Memphis, Sunday he was in consultation in Louisville. The results of his visit are most important and the Cheseapeake and Ohio will build a line to Louisville from Lexington, coming through Versailles. Work will begin at once and it will be finished in two years, possibly in eighteen months.

Huntington states he can build the road for $25,000 a mile, while the short line would have cost $4,000 more than this. Huntington has secured the control of the Elizabethtown and Paducah road, and will at once go to work to build the gap which exists between Paducah and Memphis. It is said, on excellent authority that Huntington has a perfect understanding with the Louisville and Nashville Co. The managers of that corporation see another line to Memphis inevitable and prefer to have it under the control of men friendly to it and will give Huntington all facilities.

A Generous Offer.

PHILADELPHIA, March 29.—The Pennsylvania Central road has offered to take the Centennial buildings to New York for nothing and the owners offer to sell for a quarter of a million dollars to the world's fair commission. It cost $1,800,000 at first and would cost a million and a quarter or more now. The commission will consider the proposition.

Maude's Birth Day

CHICAGO, March 29.—A [illegible] says Maud S was [illegible] yesterday and the event was celebrated at Chester Park yesterday by a number of horsemen. She is in splendid condition, having [illegible] outside the right leg, which [illegible] and [illegible]. She [illegible] erably in the past year, and [illegible] for her much greater success than last year. [illegible] yesterday asked Col. Bullock, a wealthy citizen who visited her, to mark on her stall his guess as to the record she would make this year. Col. Bullock marked 2:09½, and Bain wrote 2:07. "I am confident making that with her before the season is over," he said, "she is one year older than when she made her best record, is more experienced and better educated, because at Chicago, where she made her best record, she had the disadvantage, for the wind was much against her on the first quarter, suddenly changing, she had to face it in the third quarter instead of having it with her as she should have had." It is stated she will not be matched against any other horse, but an effort will be made to have her trot here, at Chicago, and probably at Minneapolis.

Some Groundless Stories.

NEW YORK, March 29.—President Green of the Western Union Telegraph company told a reporter regarding the proposed new company: I can say with the greatest confidence that there is not a shadow of foundation for such a report. Stager resigned a while ago as vice president of this company but he then expressed a wish to retain his seat in the board until it was wanted because he did not wish entirely to sever his connection with the company in the service of which he had been for nearly thirty years. Twice before within three or four years Stager has offered his resignation but he was prevailed on to withdraw it. Lately it was again offered under circumstances that made it impossible for the board to refuse to accept it, but the reasons for the resignation were personal and I happen to know that the care of his private affairs is as much business as Stager is anxious to look after. He has considerable property.

Vanderbilt said last night he knew nothing about the plan for a new telegraph company. The assertion was also made yesterday that Vanderbilt had decided to construct an underground railway from the Grand Central depot to City Hall. He said last night there was not a word of truth in this rumor either.

World's Fair.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Commercial says the present position of the world's fair does not appear to be encouraging. A reporter called to-day on Walter Hart, local commissioner for California, and from him learned that one of the causes of present affairs is the lack of activity on the part of the executive committee. He said, very emphatically, that as the executive committee, of which he is not a member, has been assured of a subscription amount of over a million and have good promises for $500,000 more, it should go to work and show some energy. He said California was ready to appropriate a large sum if the legislature could only see that anything was being done to forward the enterprise. His colleague W B Ever, recently wrote him from San Francisco as follows: Nothing can be done here till preliminaries are completed in New York. The Commercial adds as California, or rather San Francisco, is to have a very important celebration in 1883, whereat a very large portion of American citizens are expected to assemble, this expression of the San Francisco commissioner has weight that should not be lightly overlooked in the present condition of affairs.

Federal Nominations.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Times has a long special from Albany about the recent federal nominations for this state, and says Senator Conkling will certainly oppose with all his power the confirmation of Judge Robertson. The fact appears to be that the whole programme is the work of the magnetic secretary of state. He is understood to have handed to the president the names of five persons which were sent to the senate Tuesday of last week. He foresaw the storm which would be raised by the announcement of these nominations and he had trimmed his sails to take advantage of the gale. The nominations were received by the senate Tuesday morning. During the afternoon and evening of that day Secretary Blaine and the president assert many telegrams poured in against the nominations. Then it was that Blaine suggested to the president the name of Judge Robertson, his (Blaine's) ardent adherent and advocate, as a panacea for the evil which the administration had brought on itself by its action. The president good-naturedly assented to this view with the result now well known.

New-Mexican Marauders.

CHICAGO, March 29.—A Santa Fe dispatch says eighty of the best citizens of Rio Arriba county have petitioned Governor Wallace to take prompt action against the desperadoes who disgrace the territory. Wallace ordered Adjutant General Frost to go immediately with sixty stands of rifles and ten ten thousand rounds of ammunition and organize two military companies to act as a sheriff's posse. The robbers are led by Ike Stockton, and have headquarters near the Colorado line at Durango.

Ex-President Hayes now smiles in his retreat in Fremont. President Garfield in the White House is anything but happy.

The dispensing of patronage is pretty business for a statesman and president of the United States. Yet it is the most of his work. How we dignify this lofty office

Patronage seems to be a more important question than any of the principles in the Chicago platform which were not thought during the campaign glittering generalities.

The war against the president's nominations seems to be confined to Chandler and Robertson. Both are personal friends of Blaine. We have not yet heard of Blaine's friends fighting the Conkling nominations.

Much complaint is made against some of President Garfield's nominations by senators yet they are infinitely more respectable and republican than those made by the senate caucus which made two important nominations, Gorham for secretary of the senate and Riddleberger for sergeant at arms. Gorham bolted the republican ticket in California at the last election he attended. In 1878 he advised that the hard money issue be given up and greenback views be substituted. He is a quasi republican repudiated by the whole republican party of his state. Riddleberger is the author of the repudiation bill in Virginia and his nomination is due to a bargain. The republican senators have little to boast of.

There seems to be some question about what the policy of the prohibition party should be in the coming caucus. We print a letter in another column which strongly dissents from the opinions we expressed yesterday. This expresses the opinions of many of the prohibition party. It is better that both sides should be discussed before the caucus on Thursday evening so that whatever action is taken, it shall be taken understandingly. We only want to say this further, that the ticket nominated on Monday night is in no sense a whiskey or license ticket. Most of the gentlemen nominated allowed their names to be used for the purest and best of motives. They think that our city affairs at the present time need wise and prudent management. They have therefore signified their willingness to take an office which confers no honor on them, some sacrifice of time and a good deal of disagreeable labor. They are heavy taxpayers and have to a large degree the confidence of the community. It is only just that this should be said. The movement, whatever it may result in, was in no sense a whiskey one. Three years ago we had a whiskey ticket put up under the euphonious name of "Temperance and Reform" and naturally all movements not under the sanction and lead of the prohibition party have since been regarded with suspicion. But it is a mistake to make the same criticism of the ticket of Monday night. It was nominated for the purpose and only purpose of securing an economical administration of our affairs. So far as their position on the question of prohibition is concerned we have no pledges and must depend entirely on their character and record. We believe that the candidates should have been selected for two things, first for their ability to conduct the city's finances wisely and prudently; and secondly for their pledge to enforce the prohibition ordinance. There is no denying the fact that the majority of the people in the city are anxious for lower taxes and the prohibition party must recognize this fact. Now if we can nominate another ticket throughout on Thursday night which will to an equal degree command the respect and confidence of the tax payers and will at the same time agree to do its best to enforce the prohibition ordinance, we earnestly recommend that the ticket be nominated.

GARFIELD AND HIS TROUBLES

President Garfield's troubles have just begun. Our dispatches indicate dissatisfaction on every side. Even in the cabinet itself where he should have expected support there is strong opposition to some of his nominations. The clamor of political chiefs for patronage is unceasing, unrelenting and greedy. Sooner or later President Garfield will see that the policy of conciliation to all parties is impossible. If he wants peace, he must do one of two things, either he must let a clique run his administration as Grant did, or he must ignore all cliques as Hayes did in his appointments and act according to his own judgment. No other course will give him peace and it will give as much satisfaction as his present course. His cabinet will not act unitedly and hold together because it is too heterogenous. It is splitting up now because it represents factions and those factions are quarrelling over the spoils.

There could be no more forcible argument given in favor of civil service reform than the present disgraceful scrabble for office among the politicians. If it was not for the spoil system and the prostitution of the civil service to political uses, there would be no such scramble for office. Take the nomination of Judge Robertson which causes the most discussion. Judge Robertson was not nominated for collector of customs because he was more fit than the present occupant but because he was the representative of a political faction. Senator Conkling opposes him, not because he is not fit for the office, but because he will not be his political tool. If Senator Conkling objected to his confirmation because those of his constituents interested, the merchants of New York protested against it, his opposition would be respectable. But he does not. He thinks that the custom house should be administered in his interest and opposes Robertson for this reason alone. The collector of customs has really nothing to do with the real usefulness of Conkling as the representative of New York in the United States senate. It will not aid him in any way. He wants to control it to keep his personal hold on the machine and increase his political strength. This is all wrong and is a bad innovation. The fact that Judge Robertson is appointed to collect the government revenue is forgotten. His fitness for the position has not been mentioned in the discussion. The discussion has turned purely on personal and political questions. Whether he will run the patronage of his office in favor of this or that man, whether he will checkmate Mr. Conkling or not. The only remedy for this is to remove these appointments entirely from the sphere of practical politics. Senators must deserve and keep their seats by virtue of ability, integrity and usefulness and not through patronage. How this can be done it is difficult to say. But in the particular case of Judge Robertson, it can be done by withdrawing his name and keeping Merritt, who is a good officer, in the position. Merritt has greatly reduced the cost of collecting revenue and gives satisfaction to the merchants. He represents no faction and has nothing to do with practical politics. President Garfield has frequently given utterance to such views as the above, and he is likely to be convinced all the more firmly of their soundness.

The "Lost Cause" Authority.

Vicksburg, Miss., Herald.

It is altogether probable that Jefferson Davis' book concerning the civil war will be the last which will be written from a southern standpoint, and the historian of the future who shall undertake to give the world an impartial history of the great struggle will naturally depend chiefly upon Mr. Davis' book for the southern view of the causes and conduct of the war. A great responsibility has devolved upon him, and we are quite sure that he is the fittest of all the survivers of the war to assume the responsibility. All that can be said in justification of secession will be said by him and well said, and surely no southern man can fail to be pleased at any clear vindication of the step. The dogma of the right of secesion is of course forever abandoned by the south, and we do not apprehend that Mr. Davis will make any attempt to revive it. It is part and parcel of "The Lost Cause," which will have no resurrection day. It has had its burial shroud. It will have no ascension robe.

Many people are alarmed at the prospect of Jay Gould securing a line to the Gulf of Mexico. They fear he will make it a mere railroad pool.

Prohibition

To the Editor of the Gazette —

Because a council will not do, or possibly can not do worse than one which has failed to do its duty is but little in its favor. The citizens' caucus last night nominated a ticket of which the GAZETTE could say it would not do worse than the one elected one year ago. Rather a trifling recommendation, that "None of these gentlemen nominated are pledged to sustain or execute the prohibition ordinance." The prohibition question was completely ignored. In short, some so called prohibition men and friends of license united in caucus" to nominate men for city officers who will not interfere with the present order of drinking and drunkenness, that liquor is sold in four or five drug stores one of which at least is neither more nor less than a liquor saloon, notwithstanding. Is it nothing that already law is defied by a number of drug liquor saloons? That the "common drunkards have no apparent difficulty in getting whisky? That the policy of the next council, in case the present nominees are elected, will not be different in respect to prohibition from that of the last council—weak and ineffectual? Certainly if the present degree of drunkenness and disregard of law is not sufficient to make prohibition an issue then more of the same kind will hardly be sufficient, even the opening of "more drug stores for the purpose of selling liquor almost exclusively."

To every true prohibitionist the issue is already clearly made. Not only because the liquor question was ignored by the "citizen's caucus" but that this was done in the very face of the present retrograde tendency, when drunkenness is becoming common on our streets, when insult and injury are offered the hundreds who are here by our prohibition professions.

If the prohibition people are defeated it can hardly be worse but defeat belongs to the other side.

THE DEVIL'S DELIRIUM

Effect of a Trip Through a High Altitude

The San Juan Prospector says: "We have received the following contribution from an old correspondent, and publish the same for the benefit of our readers who may be looking southward."

Those who have traveled extensively among the lofty peaks of the Sierra Madra mountains in Old Mexico, have doubtless heard the miners of that region tell of the La Casa del Diabol, or house of the Devil. The particular point referred to is located amid the jagged peaks at the very summit of the Sierras. Many of the people residing in those regions have a singular superstition that his Satanic Majesty will, at times, cast his spell upon those who shall dare to invade his realms, and that the victim of his unamiable mood falls into a dreamy, insensible condition which they call "the Devil's Delirium." I had no conception of the character of the malady, and regarded the whole matter as the vagaries of ignorance, until my late travels among the Sierra Madras, when I experienced the full import of their superstition.

In my minerological explorations of Old Mexico, in 1879, myself and party reached the summit of the Sierra Madra on the 22d day of May, the altitude being about 13,000 feet above the sea level. We at once detected the peculiar electrical condition of the atmosphere, as it soon began to effect the entire party of five men to a greater or less extent. At first I was affected by a sharp stinging sensation, immediately followed by a dull, benumbing influence, which seemed to paralyze the senses. I then lapsed into a disturbed slumber, in which it appeared to me that I retained my consciousness entire, while visions passed before me which no language can convey, and no symbols of happiness or terror represent.

At one time I would seem to soar on the pinions of an angel among the splendor of the highest heavens, beholding at a glance the beauties of their unveiled mysteries, and listening to harps and choral symphonies over which time, sorrow and death have no power; and then my presumption was checked. My cleaving wings, like the waxen plumes of Icarus, were melted away, and I fell down, down till caught in the bosom of a thunder cloud, from which I was again hurled, linked to the fiercest bolt, upon the foaming verge of a cataract that carried me down, frantic with terror, into the lowest depths of its howling chasm.

Scenes of the War

Interview with Gen Gordon in New York

Mrs Gordon is a charming specimen of a Georgian lady She has a mouthful of the most perfect teeth one can see any where With the slender and graceful body of a girl and the shy yet engaging manners of a huntress, she is said to be already a grandmother During the war she went with Gordon to the camp and lived with him and the family among the troops scarcely retiring in the time of battle She has been a fine horsewoman from childhood and still rides at her Georgia farm constantly Her youngest boy was born on the night of the last offensive movement in the rebel lines at Petersburg and, as the general says the event was announced with a greater salute of cannon than greeted the birth of any of the Napoleons or Romanoffs

General Gordon is one of the most popular men who ever sat in the senate Although the bravest of the brave on the rebel side he has never been aggressive in his nature since he re-entered civil life and has always been for placating and restoring good feeling and therefore he left the senate without an enemy He was mining coal and iron in northern Alabama when the war broke out and was made a captain in the line His manners and address made him the pet of the army while his determined yet quiet quality as a fighter rapidly promoted him, and he has been one of the best shot men in the country

I asked Mrs Gordon if she did not suffer a good deal during the war, seeing him so frequently go out to battle with the prospect of coming before her dead in a few minutes or hours

"Yes,' she said, 'I had much suffering Every time he left me I thought it might be the last, but I had rather seen him brought home dead than to run.'

"She is the best soldier of the two," cried the general, laughing "She can beat me now at a foot race. I heard it said, too, that Gordon and his wife were never separated, in a marriage of twenty six years, over four weeks at a time."

A BADLY WOUNDED MAN.

"Where did you get that hole in your face, general?"

"At Antietam, Johnny I pretty nearly came to my end there, and Mrs Gordon was very close to being a widow. I was shot through the calf of the leg early in the day, and, although it did not pain me, it gave me the impression of having torn my whole leg off my body, such was the shock. Then I got a hole further up the leg, and was next shot in the arm, and then nearly had my shoulder torn off. I felt as if I had gone to pieces then, and thought they were putting it altogether rather hard on me when I got this ball in my face, and it broke me all up and came out below my ear and that was the last I knew for some time."

"Where were you, Mrs. Gordon, when he got all those wounds?"

"I was at Richmond, but hearing of the battle, I pushed on to Winchester, and when I arrived there the doctors told me the general would probably have to die that he had refused to come off the field, and had been drained of almost every drop of blood before he was disabled walking about there in his boots, with holes through him, six or seven hours, and bleeding all the time The doctors told me I must be very cautious and not disturb his nerves When I knocked at the door of his room in Winchester, his voice came up just as naturally as I ever heard it, crying 'Come in' I opened the door and there he lay, his leg trussed up, and his arm trussed up, and his face a perfect mass of blood, bruises and distortion 'Ha! ha! Mollie,' he said, 'here is your handsome man, do look at him! he has been to an Irish fair.'"

"General," said Johnny, "you must have suffered greatly while recovering from all those wounds."

"Oh, yes, for a long time. The constant weakness, almost worse than death, was, perhaps, the greatest affliction for weeks and weeks and months to lie there and expect every breath you drew should be the last. My jaw could not chew and I was kept alive on brandy and beef tea."

"And yet," said Mrs Gordon, "he went back to the same place before he was quite well, and then came the battles of the Wilderness, and he got wounded again. I wanted him to come out of the war honorably, but I was in hopes when he went off after these wounds, that he would turn out not strong enough to keep the field, yet he continued to grow better after he took the field again, and so he went right through the war."

Here I may say that Gordon was the general chosen to make the last big charge of the war at Appomattox, and just at the moment of moving in as the federal cavalry drew off to either side the long blue lines of the Sixth corps were unrolled, and it was seen that the confederates would be swallowed up in lead and fire. Then, fortunately, the word came not to attack, as negotiations were proceeding.

"FROM GRAVE TO GAY"

General Gordon said to me "Johnny, I hope never to go through such a war as that again I don't believe I could stand it now, but then we don't know Some scenes arise on my mind as if they never could have happened I often think of Spottsylvania, where I saw my men standing on the dead bodies of their comrades, loading and firing utterly indifferent to the death below them, the death in front of them, and the death everywhere The dead bodies were lying down outside the works, in the ditch which was half filled with water and there, soaking in the rain, the dead men lay and their friends were using their bodies to get a little elevation in putting in that terrific work

Railroads in Russia

Pall Mall Gazette

The Russian government after five years cessation from railway building is once more turning its attention to works of peace There are now 40 railway companies in Russia working 23 000 kilometres of metaled road but only six of them pay dividends of from 6 to 21 per cent. All the rest are kept going at the cost of the state It is noted by the St Petersburg correspondent of the Temps as a curious fact that not a single Jew is connected with the management of any of the dividend paying lines. After having tried the plan of allowing private companies to make railways, the government has abandoned it in disgust, and the new Russian lines will be constructed by the state For the Polish line from Dombrova to Ivangorod, the old system of construction by concessions granted to companies will be maintained The lines between Ekaterisburg and Tumen, and that of Ekaterinosla, which will unite the Dneiper and the southern coal fields, will be constructed by engineers nominated by the minister of public works and representatives of the treasury Funds are to be raised by foreign loans.

A Zulu Princess

A party of Zulus, for exhibition in a museum, have arrived in New York. Among them are the Princess Amazulu, an alleged daughter of King Ceyewayo, and half a dozen royal attendants. The princess has passed her teens. She is of medium height and of shapely form, and her gestures are numerous and vivacious. She wore a gayly striped shawl, which was the principal article of her toilet. Around her neck was twisted a fur boa and a string of bright hued beads of curious shape. The arrangement of her hair would puzzle a hair dresser. It was a cross between a pyramid and cylinder in shape, and its ornamental designs were complex and hieroglyphic The princess understood English sufficient to say something about the Melican men around, which she supplemented by an oration in her native tongue. She possesses a silver assegai, rumored to have been presented her by English officers after the battle of Alundi, for giving timely warning of the approach of the enemy. "The Princess Amazulu" is inscribed upon the blade Her maid of honor, Unamadloza, has a willowy, well-proportioned figure, and carries an infant in arms that resembles a "pickaninny" His forehead reaches nearly to the back of his head, where a heavy tuft of hair sprouts in tangled masses. His skin is slimy, and he has a weakness for chewing the top of his mother's ear. The other Zulus are tall and gayly attired, and their names are Incomo, the chief and husband of Unamadloza, Mbala, the "Witch doctor," and Usefila Estamala and Manzi, male attendants.

The Tribune says the princess was escorted to a carriage, followed by the war-whoops of her attendants, who were provided with cabs. Crossing the river to New York the party was driven up Broadway, accompanied by a curious throng Several hundred spectators crowded the sidewalk in front of the museum when the party alighted The three Zulus who have made life a burden to visitors by their vocal exhibitions awaited anxiously the arrival of their fellow countrymen At last the carriage drove up, and the princess and her retinue received a royal greeting. The air was filled with cries of welcome and exultation The Zulus shook hands rapidly, slapped each other's backs and danced up and down with delight. The princess received a low obeisance, and the "pickaninny" crowed like a rooster The party then made a tour of the museum [illegible] narrowly the curiosities The hairy nihilist was closely examined by the princess who pinched his skin and pulled out several hairs to test their genuineness The nihilists protested, but the princess persisted Having obtained a small capillary collection she gave a grunt of satisfaction and passed on The bearded girl seemed to astonish the princess She threw up her arms in amazement, her eyes dilated, and her generous sized mouth revealed its inmost recesses 'O me baboo she exclaimed of which 'Great Heavens is said to be something of an equivalent 'Carintombe' (that is not a girl') she continued declaring it was "Lmfan,' a boy Finally satisfied, she seated herself where the Zulus gave their war dance and assumed a melancholy air. She explained that she was disappointed because the museum was not as large as the royal aquarium

After a week's vacation the spring term of Colorado College will open to-morrow.

There were ten passenger coaches on the Denver express yesterday afternoon.

Articles of incorporation of the El Paso Live Stock Co. were yesterday filed with the county clerk.

Work on the new Methodist Episcopal church is progressing rapidly and the structure is nearly enclosed.

There will be a special communication of El Paso Lodge, A. F. and A. M. No. 13 to-night. Work on the third degree.

Mr. E. R. Hock, the newly appointed superintendent of the gas works is giving entire satisfaction and we understand that he is making some extensive improvements in and about the works.

Mail has been received twice lately upon the regular mail train reaching here at 3.30 p. m. It was expected that when the new running schedule took effect on the Santa Fe that it would be received here regularly.

The remains of Mr. Alex. Hastie, who died about a week ago, were yesterday interred in Greenwood cemetery. The remains were embalmed and held for instructions from his family in Hartford, Connecticut, and word was received yesterday to bury him here.

The Elk Mountain Pilot has the following item concerning some pretty good work by Colorado Springs men. The Pilot says: "Messrs. Edward Copley, Mike Lawler and Mike Cowley did 18 feet of work on the Venango tunnel, in two days last week, and wheeled the rock 170 feet."

We call our readers' attention to the notice given this morning by Mr. Fly, superintendent of the waterworks, to the effect that during the remainder of this week the water will be shut off from some portion of the city for three or four hours each day in order to make connections with the mains. The superintendent suggests that citizens take the precaution to secure a supply of water in case of need.

Street Commissioner Martin was yesterday busy cleaning out the irrigation ditches in various parts of the city. Water is now freely flowing in many of the ditches, but we are informed by the superintendent of water works that the water does not come from the irrigation ditch, but is simply the overflow from the reservoir. It will be some time before we get the water regularly from the main ditch, as it is yet undergoing repairs.

Yesterday shortly after noon a drunken Mexican was the means of causing considerable amusement to a crowd of bystanders near the corner of Pike's Peak avenue and Tejon street. Seated on a mouse colored broncho he rode about the street sometimes turning in circles and frequently riding his steed on the side. He was so completely paralyzed with liquor that it was with difficulty that he retained his seat in the saddle, for he would every few moment's sway from one side of the saddle to the other. After riding about for a short time he conceived the idea of riding his horse into the First National Bank, but upon reaching the door step he was prevailed upon by one of his friends to abandon the foolish scheme. For perhaps a half hour he continued to ride wildly about endangering the lives of the children and compelling the lady pedestrians to resort to the stores for safety. No officers were in the vicinity at the time and consequently no arrests were made.

LETTERS OF MARQUE

How an Affectionate Couple Propose to Become One.

It is a good deal easier, as a general thing, to get married than to untie the marriage knot. There are very many ways of getting married all of which are legal and extremely binding, some of which are slow and all of which are sure. There are ways of getting married which are rapid and some enthusiastic lovers have gone so far as to engage the telegraph in their service and get married by lightning. The telephone has also been called into use and the sepulchral "Hello" of the bridegroom at one end of the line has been answered by the hollow and distant "Well" of the bride at the other and succeeded by the solemn murmurs of the clergyman at the central office, all of which has ended in the joining of two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one.

Romance has had something to do with some of these eccentric methods of marriage necessity, which knows no law, has suggested other methods and others belong to the category of things "the reason for which no fellow can find out."

The reflections casually thrown out above without any extra charge for beauty of expression or logical arrangement, were suggested to the writer by an occurrence which took place in this city recently. We say the occurrence took place, perhaps it would be more correct to say the occurrence is in process of taking place. The facts, not to mention names, are as follows: A young gentleman recently arrived in Colorado Springs from the east to join the lady of his choice, who had preceded him. The two had been engaged for some time and the visit of the young gentleman was for the purpose of being joined in marriage with his affianced.

But there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. In this case the clergyman from the east who was known to both and who expected to visit Colorado Springs and perform the ceremony found it impossible to do as he had hoped. The young lady and gentleman could not think of being married by a stranger in a strange land and the result was the ingenious plan at which we have hinted. They resolved to be married by letter. It takes about a week for a letter to go from Colorado Springs to the residence of the clergyman and the same time for a reply so that even if the ceremony is greatly condensed it will take some time to reach the triumphant "I wills" and the benedictory "Let no man put asunder." However the young people, nameless here forevermore, are resolved to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer. No cards.

Obituary—Robert W. Greene

It becomes our sad duty to record the death of Mr. Robert W. Greene, a well-known and universally respected young man who died yesterday morning at 11.10 at the Colorado Springs hotel after a protracted illness from typhoid fever.

Mr. Greene was born in Jackson parish, Louisiana, in 1856, attended college in Tennessee and Kentucky and was appointed to West Point in 1873 where, after two years study and promotion, was honorably discharged on account of dyspepsia, which he had contracted while there. He came west and with his brother, the Hon. C. J. Greene, of the Louisiana legislature, and Mr. John H. Linck, engaged in the sheep business in this county. A few weeks ago he came to town and succombed to that relentless destroyer, typhoid fever, and notwithstanding the very best medical attention, he slowly failed. His brothers were telegraphed for, and came at once from Louisiana and Leadville. These devoted brothers watched and nursed him until the last.

He lacked only a few weeks of being twenty-four years of age. A southerner born and bred he was ever known to be a gentleman of perfect integrity and genuine hospitality, and we offer our sincerest condolences to his afflicted family. His remains will be interred at 10.30 this morning in Evergreen cemetery.

A Favored Range.

The Fairplay Flume says: "The cattle men of the South Park may be considered fortunate indeed in their selection of ranges. They will suffer less in the loss of cattle than any other portion of the state. It is true the storms have been severe, and the winter protracted, and with succeeding snows fears have naturally arisen that the result would be disastrous to the horned herds. Yet as better weather has followed, the outlook has brightened each time and the stock raisers have rejoiced to find that much of their fear has been groundless. It is a matter of surprise to all how well the cattle are wintering. Since the last storm, a number of stock men have been interviewed, and they express general satisfaction at the result. One prominent stockman reports having been riding over the country between Buffalo Slough and the Platte river, where he passed through large herds that were in fair condition, and in all his riding saw less than a dozen head of dead critters. It seems that wherever cattle have ranged over the rim of the park and have got among the foot hills, they have fared badly, and the loss among such will be heavy, but taking the park throughout, the best judges say the loss will not exceed ten per cent. Should the grass come on rapidly in the spring the South Park will turn off more beef, in proportion to its area, than any other portion of the west."

WISE MEN FROM THE EAST

More Than Three Hundred of Them Coming to Visit Colorado.

The announcement has already been made of the proposed excursion this spring from New England and other parts of the east for Colorado and California, but the proportions of this party having outgrown the original plan and some changes having thus been brought about, some further facts concerning the matter will be of interest. Mr Samuel H. Wallace, of Philadelphia, one of the managers of this enterprise, writes to Capt. M. L. DeCoursey, of this city, under date of March 24th, as follows: "There has been a slight change in programme since the excursion was planned, as we found the demand for passage was far beyond expectations. It has been arranged to start the first six cars—175 persons—from Boston, as advertised, on the 18th, going through as per programme, a second section will start one week later, exactly duplicating the trip as it is advertised. This arrangement will give us two cars from here (Philadelphia) on second section, and three from Boston, making a five car train with about 130 persons. Both sections are already full, with a number left out in the cold. Under this arrangement the first party will arrive at Denver and Manitou April 24th, and the second party May 1st. I will be with the latter. All arrangements with hotels and carriage men have been made with the general passenger agent of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad by Mr. Whitcomb, one of the managers of the excursion."

From the preceding it will be seen that Colorado Springs is soon to be visited by over three hundred ladies and gentlemen from the east who will spend at least two days in this city and at Manitou. One feature of the stop here will be the excursions to the points of scenic interest near Colorado Springs and Manitou. Of these the itinerary, prepared by the managers of the excursion, says: "Points of interest will be visited by carriage, the trip including visits to Wilhams' Canon, which contains a great number of eccentric and fanciful geological formations in the semblance of huge castles, gigantic cathedrals, pulpits, quaint resemblances to human faces, animals, etc., the Ute Pass; Rainbow Falls; Pike's Peak trail; Ute iron spring, soda springs; the famed Garden of the Gods; Glen Eyrie, where General Palmer, president of the Denver and Rio Grande railway, resides; the mesa; a return via Colorado Springs; and the Ridges. The Garden of the Gods is a beautiful undulating park, filled with the most weird and fantastic groupings of rocks and boulders, which are susceptible of transformation, by a slight draft on the imagination, into the most striking resemblances. The picture from the gateway is probably unequalled in natural beauty on the continent. On either side rise huge red rocks, perpendicularly, to the height of nearly four hundred feet. Beyond the narrow passage is a velvety plateau which fancy has peopled with some of the fabled personages of ancient times. On the left are the Cathedral spires, in front the Sphinx and her fantastic companions and beyond all is the snowy curtain of Pike's Peak."

During their stay the excursionists will visit Pike's Peak and on Tuesday, April 26th, they will take a trip over the Denver and Rio Grande road to the Grand Canon. Of this the itinerary says: "Through the courtesy of the managers of the Denver and Rio Grande railway, a special train of drawing-room cars will be furnished for this delightful trip. Leaving Manitou in the morning, we shall proceed to Colorado Springs, thence southward to Pueblo, and from that point over the Leadville division of the road through Canon City. At this latter point, open observation cars are taken for the ride through the Royal Gorge, which is a narrow and deep cleft in the mountains, through which the turbulent waters of the Arkansas river find their way. The road passes in between the giant walls of red granite, hewing its pathway in places from the overhanging cliffs, and in another spanning the stream with an iron bridge. Huge promontories seem to bar the progress of the adventurer, but a sharp curve carries us beyond to fresh scenes of grandeur. Shadowy gorges diverge on either side, and in places along our pathway the massive walls tower above us to a height of 2,000 or 2,500 feet. During the trip, the cars will stop at various points to permit the passengers to gain the best views. Returning to Pueblo, a stop will be made for dinner, and the journey will then be resumed to Denver."

Our readers will observe that the programme is quite an exhaustive one and includes to a good degree the scenic points near this city. The result of this visit can not fail to be beneficial to Colorado Springs and the result of similar visits to other parts of Colorado will surely benefit the state.

The promiscuous poisoning of dogs still continues, and we are informed that some person or persons are scattering poisoned meats in all portions of the city. It is known that on several occasions meat has been thrown into the yards of private residences simply for the purpose of poisoning dogs that were not addicted to running in the streets. While we affirm that all the worthless curs should be summarily disposed of we at the same time protest against the indiscriminate killing of dogs many of which are licensed and entitled to protection.

NOT IN THE BEST OF TEMPER

How the Utes that Went to Washington Feel.

Indian Agent W. H. Berry, Major J. C. Bundy and Lieutenant Rodgers, of the Fourth cavalry, accompanied by Charlie Alhandre, Colorow and McCook, three Utes, passed through this city last Monday, bound for the reservation, as was noted in the GAZETTE yesterday. The party spent Sunday in Denver, and members of it in conversation with a Republican reporter said that the three Utes behaved themselves very well, indeed, on the trip, and were much interested in what they saw. They were in Washington on inauguration day, and were greatly impressed with the parade on that occasion. They never stirred until the entire procession had passed, and then they followed it up to the capitol, and during the delivery of the inaugural crowded as closely to the president as they could. The fireworks in the evening pleased them greatly, and was a marvel to them.

The entire party agreed that the Utes are not in the best of temper. They are not very friendly, and exhibit this feeling by an undisguised irritability. Yet, while an Indian war is possible it is not regarded as probable. It may be averted entirely by careful management. When the treaty was made Ouray was still alive. Uncompahgre Utes signed the treaty because they accepted his word as law and gospel. Not more than ten in 100 of them know what the treaty is or what it means. The Southern Utes understand the treaty, and are said to be satisfied.

"Agent Berry," said an army officer, "if left alone will move the Utes according to contract, and without a war, too. An Indian war means more than a war with the Utes. It means a break-out of the Navajoes, Apaches and Piutes, with the Mormons at their back with arms, ammunition and moral support."

That the Utes will "go" there is no doubt. They will eventually be removed entirely beyond the borders of Colorado. Patience should be exercised upon the border. A war should be averted if possible. One of the first essentials to preserve peace is that white men should remain off the reservation until the Utes are removed. The violent death of one Ute by a white man would be sure to precipitate a war, and no efforts should be spared to avert such a catastrophe.

Popular Lectures.

Mrs. Agnes Leonard Hill, associate editor of the Chaffee County Times, is engaged in lecturing on literary and social topics throughout the state. We are informed that if suitable arrangements can be made Mrs. Hill will lecture in this city. The Denver News of yesterday has the following concerning this lady's lecture in that city last Monday evening. "The last but one of the course of lectures being delivered by Mrs. Agnes Leonard Hill, under the auspicices of the university of Denver, was given last evening in the chapel of the university. There was quite a large attendance. The subject was a favorite one with the lecturer, whose admiration for the philosophic Ralph Waldo Emerson, is well known, consequently her treatment of her subject was unlike that of a critic, cool and unimpassioned, but friendly and glowing, her own appreciation of every word she quoted being clearly evinced. If Emerson's writings have any faults, if he is cold, cynical, overbearing and illogical, Mrs. Hill, evidently, was unaware of it. Viewed from the lecturer's standpoint, his writings, like himself, were sentient of wisdom, they were bright and glittering as the dew drops, and laden with a richness of thought and inspirationality that was scarcely less divine. Dickens had the freedom of style and perfect flow of language which concealed the absence of something better. George Eliot the beauty and dignity of thought and expression, but Emerson towered beyond them in breadth of thought, in dignity of expression and in that impersonation which would make his writings live to all ages. The audience applauded Mrs. Hill at the conclusion of the lecture which lasted nearly an hour. The fourth and last of the series will be given this evening."

Shooting at a Supposed Burglar

A certain young man, an attache of the auditor's office of the Denver and Rio Grande, arrived in the city at quite a late hour several nights ago. After partaking of an oyster stew at one of the city restaurants, he proceeded to his room on Pike's Peak avenue, for the night. When he first entered the apartment he was somewhat surprised to find another person occupying his bed, and he was at a loss to know what to do. Further search revealed to him the form of another person, apparently a man, crouched in the corner of the room. He came to the conclusion that there must be a burglar, and pulling out a revolver he let drive at the crouching form in the corner. No scream, not even a whisper, followed the discharge of the weapon. This puzzled the gentleman still more, and before discharging the revolver again he concluded to light the lamp and investigate a little.

He was greatly surprised to discover that the forms in both the bed and in the corner were nothing but effigies. It appears that some of the ladies who boarded in the same house had conceived the idea of having some fun and stuffing two old suits of clothes with straw they placed them in the aforesaid gentleman's room. The following day it was ascertained that the ball shot from the revolver had passed through the shoulder and sleeve of the gentleman's best Sunday coat, which was hanging upon the wall in the rear of the effigy. Suffice to say that the ladies had all the amusement they wanted and it will be some time before the gentleman hears the last of it.

Mr. C. W. Barker expects to open his new hotel at Manitou on the first of April. Although his house may not be as large and commodious as some of the other Manitou hotels it is very convenient and well arranged. It will have about forty large and handsomely furnished rooms. Manitou never had a more popular landlord than Mr. Barker and we predict that the house will be crowded with guests from the day it opens.

Peter Mariani is pushing his improvements along quite rapidly, and when the addition to his store is completed he will have much more room than he has heretofore had.
